

Gorillas invading new york!

Find out how the gorillas invaded new york in today's article of Reliability.

On their search for bananas, a troop of gorillas known as the "Banana hunters" invaded New York. "They came out of no-where and stole my lunch!" Said a bystander. According to scientists they arrived in New York after a wormhole originating on Jupiter spit them out next to the Empire State Building. A brave onlooker was fixing pipes when the gorillas stormed down the street towards several scared citizens, he saw the conflict and started throwing the contents of his toolbox at a gorilla trying to rob two bystanders. The thrown items included, a wrench, a roll of toilet paper, some of his lunch, and several different sizes of screwdrivers."I just did what anyone in my situation would have." Said Bob Jenkins of Bob's pipe repairs.

For more incredible stories, visit reliability.org

PDF version Main page